

Seaside garden in autumn

The seaside garden is a perfect example that there is no need to execute the whole garden at once. The most important thing is that you have a certain plan, a project, which guides you from the very start. Having a project one can evaluate the costs of a garden, which helps you to decide when and what to build. It also helps to make a proper evaluation of priorities concerning building a garden. As the garden has not been finished yet I still keep being in touch with the owners of the garden and I am helping them to oversee the whole project. During all this years we have developed a beautiful relationship, better to say a friendship. I hope the garden will show the fruits of this collaboration for years to come.
